• Word perfect: How to help Secondary students boost their vocabulary

Dave Spencer

Vocabulary teaching can often appear relatively simple and straightforward, but unfortunately vocabulary learning by the students can seem frustratingly slow and difficult! In this session we will investigate what it means to really 'know' a word, and what influence this has on how we should recycle and practise vocabulary in the Secondary classroom. We will also explore how memory works and the important implications that this can have for the design of recycling activities that genuinely help students to boost their word power. There will be demonstration of a wide variety of practical classroom activities and strategies, the aims of which are to make vocabulary learning more effective, stimulating and enjoyable for Secondary students.

• Getting Inside Language: What do our students really need to improve their knowledge of language?

Jonathan Coxall

Language learning can be an uphill struggle for many of our students, but this perhaps is more a reflection on the study skills that they have acquired over the years rather than a statement about their actual ability. This session will look at strategies for improving students' awareness of language and giving them the tools to make real use of the language that they are presented.

• Teenagers and exam preparation: what do we mean by 'skills development'?

Malcolm Mann

In this session, we'll look at the needs of teenagers - and their teachers - in terms of preparing adequately for English language exams. We'll examine what the term 'skills development' really means, and we'll explore successful ways to develop our students' ability to deal with reading, writing, listening and speaking. Examples will mainly come from Laser, Macmillan's successful exam course for younger teenagers.
